COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course dives deep into the increasing important creative and entertainment business. We will explore the marketing strategy contributing to the success of creative products, including effective marketing, a unique selling proposition, and psychology of consuming entertainment products. More importantly, we will reveal the blockbuster strategy that have been widely used in creative industries (e.g. music and films), discuss in depth how the technology and innovations have shaped and challenged the global creative business, and generalize the insights into other industries, such as retailing and social media.

With elaborations on real creative business cases, such as Spotify, Marvel Enterprises, and Beyonce, students will understand the comprehensive marketing strategy behind creative products that are hugely expensive and risky to produce and market. More importantly, students will learn the logic behind entertainment business, the digital technology that transforms the landscape of entertainment industry, and how to navigate today's high-stakes business world.
